I don't care for an automobile myself unless I'm in a hurry to get somewhere, because I belong to the class that don't hurry. I like to live, to use my eyes and ears and be in harmony with the fields and woods. An auto gives too big a silee of nature, too much in masses. It may be good; like a question."

The President did not even consult Secretary Hilles or Assistant Secretary Hilles or Assistant Secretary Forster to ascertain the number of men on the force or whether any of them could be spared. All he knew was that Mr. Burleson, intimating that expenditures must be kept to the limit, had desired to make some of the cut in the White House, and he acquiesced without further ado.

Major Sylvester received his orders from Commissioner Johnston, and without delay issued orders for the return to their respective precincts of twenty-two men. These orders were temporarily delayed so as to permit the use of the present force at the White House to-day, during the President House, and he ach change in the situation the orders will go into effect January 3.
